Dear Dr. Sabin:

I have your letter of June 24. I am sorry that I did not see you before I left New York on the 20th. I decided rather suddenly to go off with Helen and William, who were motoring to Chocorua, and then had to rush to get away. I meant to see you, Doan and some others to say goodbye and to wish you a very good summer. I do hope that you will have a happy and refreshing one, which you have more than earned.

I had a very nice note from Doan. It was a great pleasure to have it. He is an able and nice young man and should go very far.

Now about the colored plates. There is no difficulty whatever in your having what you need. I should not transfer the budget saving. It is better to let it revert, which is the rule, and to deal with plate costs as they arise. The Journal always pays part of the cost. The reason I thought you should know about and deal with Kubie's plates was that I thought them excessive and not critically chosen. Hereafter, I think he should get your consent in having colored drawings made with a view to publication. Your budget pays the cost of the drawing, whether it is used or not.

I shall read Kubie's papers with much interest. I am confident that he will improve greatly in writing up and presenting his material under your guidance.

Now do have a very enjoyable summer. I am asking Miss von der Osten to copy this letter on the typewriter and send it to you.

Yours sincerely,

Simon Flexner,
A.D.
